I am aware that low-income employment (450 euro mini-job) is generally subject to statutory insurance and full contributions must be paid (from 1st January 2013). Exemption is however possible. To apply for exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions, submit the completed application for exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contribution ("Antrag auf Befreiung von der Rentenversicherungspflicht bei einer geringfügig entlohnten Beschäftigung") to your employer.

I confirm that the information given is correct. I commit to informing the State Finance Office (Landesamt für Finanzen) immediately of all changes that may influence my obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions (or lack thereof), in particular if

- I take up or end another employment,
- I change my health insurance provider or
- I start receiving a retirement pension or benefits for reduced earning capacity or similar.

I consent to the exchange of details which are important for statutory insurance with additional employers if I have more than one job. This is intended to ensure that the statutory insurance contributions are paid correctly.

Information sheet on the potential consequences of exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions

General information:

As of 1 January 2013, employees who are in low-income employment (450 euro mini-job) are subject to full statutory pension insurance contributions. The part of the statutory pension insurance contribution which is to be paid by the employee is calculated as the difference between the fixed contribution made by the employer and the full statutory pension insurance contribution. It should be noted that the full statutory pension insurance contribution to be paid is based on an assumed minimum monthly pay of 175 euros.

Benefits of paying the full statutory pension insurance contribution

The benefits of paying the full statutory pension insurance contribution stem from the accumulation of compulsory contribution periods. This means that the entire period of employment is counted towards the completion of the various waiting periods (minimum periods of insurance). Such compulsory insurance periods are required, for example

- to begin receiving your pension early,
- to qualify for contributions towards rehabilitation (both medical and occupational),
- to qualify for transitional allowance (Übergangsgeld) for statutory pension insurance rehabilitation measures,
- to acquire and retain the right to a pension due to reduction in earning capacity,
- to qualify for conversion of earnings into contributions for an occupational pension scheme, or
- to fulfil the requirements for private pension schemes with government funding (e.g. the Riester-Rente scheme) for the employee and, in some cases, their spouse.

In addition, the full salary, rather than only a part of it, will be taken into account when calculating the pension.

Application for exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions

If the employee does not wish to make statutory pension insurance contributions, they may be exempted. In order to do so, the employee must inform the employer in writing that they wish to be exempted from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions using the enclosed form (appendix 2). If the employee has several low-income employment relationships, the application for exemption may only be submitted for all employment relationships which they carry out at the same time. The employee is obliged to inform all other – including future – employers for whom they carry out low-income employment of the application for exemption. Exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions is binding for the duration of all this/those employment relationship(s); it cannot be revoked.

As a rule, exemption takes effect at the start of the calendar month in which the application is received by the employer or at the beginning of the period of employment at the earliest. This requires that the employer notifies the Minijob-Zentrale (low-income employment office) of the receipt of the application for exemption before the next salary payment or within 6 weeks at the latest. If this is not the case, exemption takes effect after the end of the calendar month which follows the calendar month in which the Minijob-Zentrale was notified.

Consequences of exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions

Employees in low-income employment who apply for exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions voluntarily forgo the benefits stated above. Due to the exemption, only the employer pays the fixed contribution based on the salary. The employee does not make their part of the contribution. The consequence of this is that the months of employment only partially count towards completion of the various waiting periods and only part of the salary earned is considered in the calculation of the pension.

Please note: Before an employee decides to apply for exemption from the obligation to make statutory pension insurance contributions, it is recommended that they seek individual consultation regarding the effects of exemption at one of Deutsche Rentenversicherung's information and advice centres. Deutsche Rentenversicherung's telephone information service is free of charge on +49 800 10004800. Please have your Rentenversicherungsnummer (social security number) ready when you call the service.
